The Platte River Trail provides 10 miles of paved pathway through the Wyoming community of Casper. The trail hugs both sides of the soon arriving at the Tate Pumphouse, a beautifully restored historical building with an outdoor patio and views of Casper Mountain.

Continue heading east along the north side of the river to reach Amoco Park. If instead, you cross the river at the Pumphouse, you'll trace the southern shoreline past the Three Crowns Golf Course, a public 18-hole course. If you're up for more riding, east of the golf course you can also pick up the Casper Rail Trail, which loosely parallels U.S. Highway 26.

Past Amoco Park and the golf course, the trail winds northeast into North Platte Park. The trail skirts the North Casper Soccer Fields and ends shortly thereafter at the Bryan Stock Trail.

South of Morad Park, the trails continues just a short distance longer until reaching Paradise Valley Park and reaching its southern terminus here.

The Platte River Trail provides 10 miles of paved pathway through the Wyoming community of Casper. The trail hugs both sides of the North Platte River from Paradise Valley Park on its west end to the North Casper Sports Complex on the east side of town. On the journey, you'll have views of the river and city skyline and traverse several parks and natural landscapes. Look for interpretive signage, wildlife viewing spots and public art along the way.

A good place to begin your trail trip is Morad Park, which offers river access and picnic tables—a perfect place for a picnic lunch. From there, you'll head north and soon reach the Fort Caspar Museum, once a frontier outpost and now a place to learn about Casper's first 100 years. You'll cross the river and follow its northern shoreline,
