Kewannee Trail

Florida

Kewannee Trail is a charming, neighborhood trail in Maitland, Florida. More than just a recreation path, the trail is popular as a playground, basketball courts, restrooms. Exiting the park, trail users will then cross a road also somewhat confusingly named Kewannee Trail. A nice, cool tree-covered segment follows. The trail then basically continues north following the alignment of Howell Canal to an abrupt end at Oxford Street.

The trail begins at Cassel Creek Boulevard, beside the Semoran Skateway and travels northwest, through several neighborhoods in the area. The Skateway is a kid-friendly recreation spot so no doubt that some of the traffic on the trail will be from families walking or biking to and from the rink. The trail then parallels Cascade Circle for a spell before entering Kewannee Park, a six-acre park in the Indian Hills subdivision. A nice diversion in the park is the boardwalk side-trail over scenic native wetland. There is also a pier on the pond, as well as all the usual amenities:
